Press Release

insolvency substitute benefits.

Filing for insolvency became inevitable for the mechanical engineering company due to liquidity problems as a result of an economy-driven drop in orders received. During the proceedings, a feasible restructuring concept will be drafted over the next few weeks to verify the company's existing processes and to determine the necessary restructuring measures.

"Business operations will be maintained without restriction. All orders are being fulfilled as planned," said the managing directors Mr Andreas Eder and Mr Dirk Vogt.

Gustav Knippschild will be provided with support and advice in the proceedings by Mr Torsten Gutmann, an experienced PLUTA restructuring expert, who is generally focused on restructuring and turning around companies as part of debtor-in-possession proceedings and ordinary insolvency proceedings. For example, Mr Gutmann previously acted as the chief restructuring officer of the clinic KOL Klinikum Osnabrücker Land GmbH. PLUTA's team also includes the attorney Mr Frank Schorisch and Mr Sören Werhahn as well as the economist Mr Jürgen Schendel.

"Initial talks with customers and suppliers were encouraging. And the employees are highly motivated. This is a good basis for the coming weeks," said the PLUTA restructuring expert Mr Gutmann.

the production of large ready-to-assemble steel components for the construction machinery industry. The 78-employee-strong company, founded in 1966, has close business relations with Sander Maschinenbau GmbH & Co. KG, which also filed an application for debtor-in-possession proceedings.

About the proceedings

Debtor-in-possession proceedings ensure that the company has a reliable basis for planning and also allow creditors' interests to be taken into account. The company is permitted to manage the restructuring process itself, supported by experienced restructuring experts and supervised by an insolvency monitor. The management board remains in office during debtor-in-possession proceedings.
