“We want to identify a solution that is in the best interests of the company, creditors and staff,” said attorney Mr Barth. One potential scenario would be to find an investor that will secure the long-term future of the business. Another conceivable outcome is an agreement with creditors within the framework of an insolvency plan. “We will carefully consider every option,” he added.

Employee salaries guaranteed

The salaries of the employees are guaranteed for a period of three months thanks to specific substitute benefits provided under German insolvency law. The provisional insolvency administrator has already arranged for the pre-financing of these benefits, ensuring that the salaries will still be paid as normal.

Riffelmacher & Weinberger (R&W) is a long-standing wholesaler and producer of seasonal decorations – specifically, items for Christmas as well as products for Easter, weddings and other occasions. The company was left with no choice but to file for insolvency given liquidity problems caused by the macroeconomic environment and declining sales.
