Mädchenflohmarkt is a marketplace for second-hand fashion. Its target market is women that buy and sell clothing, shoes, bags and accessories on the platform. Founded in 2012, the company finances itself through commissions and services. In addition to providing a platform for use, it also offers a concierge service, whereby it photographs the goods and places them on the platform and then takes care of shipping.

The marketplace has remained operational since the application for insolvency was filed. All sales and purchases have been conducted via the platform. Users selling goods via the website since insolvency was ordered have also been guaranteed payment. The continuation of the business was an important prerequisite for the solution now achieved with the investor.

All sellers awaiting payment from the period prior to the company filing for insolvency can file their claims for registration in the insolvency schedule. The insolvency administrator will write to all creditors in the coming days.
